Develop your environmental fiber

Using traditional materials like cardboard made of natural paper fiber, you can achieve both sturdiness and flexibility in a single-material, recycled and recyclable product that doesn't include any environmentally harmful components.

Your clients will be able to work with innovative solutions that promote natural, organic materials, and you will be doing your part to end resource waste, reduce plastic and eliminate single-use products.

Exciting solutions

With the focus on ecodesign, Solisco is the ideal partner to optimize your environmental practices. We'll give you the opportunity to enter the circular economy and add to your value chain as you make the most of a wide range of ever more innovative packaging products and containers.

Circular economy: Stop going around in circles!

The circular economy combines environmental concerns with commitment. In the day-to-day, its goal is to produce goods while reducing leftover waste, raw material waste and the use of non-renewable energy sources.

Every month, hundreds of companies are making the move to the circular economy by integrating innovative procedures and choosing environmentally responsible packaging.

Joining the momentum, Solisco helps companies transform their approaches and practices. It pushes their brands and products further by encouraging them to adopt more results-driven strategies that are also better for the planet.

The natural-fiber, post-consumer recycled paper Solisco uses in its cardboard packaging helps turn the circular economy and lightens the load on the planet.

New bills are aiming to ban single-use plastics starting in 2023 for specific items, and expanding to many more in 2025. The new rules may come with eco-fees—a type of tax intended to compensate for practices that impact the environment.

In other words, you need to make sure the next strategies you choose fit into the new compliance requirements. The Solisco team can steer you through the process by suggesting the best ways to take action.
